impending patent expiries and government initiatives, along with generics manufacturing partnerships, may all have a role to play in increasing the use of generics in Japan.